

What to Wear for your Portrait Session

Planning a photo session? You will need to plan what to wear!

We recommend keeping it simple and if possible stay with the classic designs (such as Country Road), which will not date so quickly. It is really important to maintain some uniformity within the group.

If you are planning a studio session, maybe dark clothing; black with grey for a dark backdrop. Or the opposite can work really well; white or very light colours on a light backdrop.

We suggest that you avoid bold patterns such as stripes and spots.

If you decide on an outdoor location, consider if there is sand rocks or grass? Dress for that that setting. You will want to be comfortable sitting on the grass. You might want to bring a lead for the family dog.

Think about shades of black and white

Since your selection may include images in black and white, consider how your outfits would appear in those shades.

Bring props and accessories

Using props and accessories is a good way to create different looks.

Think about things that suit you and your personality.

Are your kids musical? Bring in their Violin!

Hairstyles

It is best not to change hairstyles just before your photo session.

Changes are best made a week or so earlier so that a new style can settle down.

Fisher Photography creates long-lasting memories of you in the best possible light.
